Executive Summary

Over the past thirty-eight years, there has been a considerable realignment of aggregate table game mix in Nevada.

- Twenty-One (blackjack) has declined in both terms of units and revenue. In 1985, 81% of casino games were blackjack. In 2023, 52% were. In 1985, the game accounted for over half of all table game revenues: in 2023, it accounted for 31% of table win.
- Craps has declined remarkably as a money-maker for casinos. In 1985, it generated nearly 27% of all table win. In 2023, it contributed 11% to total table win.
- Roulette has increased both its revenue share and unit share by about 100%.
- Baccarat spectacularly increased its win share starting in 2009, out earning blackjack since 2010. Its unit share has grown proportionately with its revenue gain. Since 2013, however, it has contracted somewhat, and in 2023 its revenue is a little more than that of blackjack’s revenue.
- Other games, including mini-baccarat, three card poker, and pai gow poker, have increased both their revenue share and their unit share.

These changes have impacted the ways that casinos operate and should be taken into consideration by both students of casino management and those interested in monitoring casino financial performance over both the short and long terms. The increased reliance on baccarat, a more volatile game, has led to greater variance in reported field results for both individual properties and the Strip as a whole.

Methodology

This study looks at how well various table games have fared in Nevada over the past thirty-eight years. Essentially, it answers the question: how have table game pits in Nevada changed?

To do this, we first tabulated data on the total number of units and revenue for each of the casino games listed by the Nevada Gaming Control Board in its monthly Gaming Revenue Report. We also included “Other Games,” which are those with six or fewer units in the reporting area in question. While bingo, keno, the race book, and the sports book are classified as “games” by the Gaming Control Board, we did not include them in this study, since we wanted to get a clear picture of table games.

For 1992 to 2023, we used the annual totals as given in the December Gaming Revenue report for the year in question. The period 1985-1991 proved to be less straightforward: the reports in that period do not generally include annual totals, so we reconstructed the annual amounts, by using quarterly and sometimes monthly reports to build the appropriate sums (revenues) and averages (units).

Instead of including all games in the unit- and revenue-share analyses, we chose to focus on the “Big Four” casino games: twenty-one (blackjack), craps, baccarat, and roulette. All other table games are classed as “Others.” The data for all game reported by the Gaming Control Board can be found in the “Raw Data” section, which begins on page 7.

With data in hand, we created two tables: one charting the revenue share per game, the other mapping the unit share per game. These show how the percentage of money earned by each game, and the floor space devoted to each game, has changed over the past quarter century.

All interpretation of the data is ours, and though it is based on the data set, involves a degree of subjective analysis.

Definitions

All data is taken from all non-restricted locations, Clark County: Nevada Statewide reporting area, as reported in the Nevada State Gaming Control Board’s Gaming Revenue Report.

Units: Total number of table games for the period in question.

Revenue: Reported win for the game during the period in question.

% Units: The unit share of the game in question, expressed as a percentage of the total table game inventory for that period.

% Revenue: The revenue share of the game in question, expressed as a percentage of the total table game revenue for that period.

Unit Share: The percentage of total table game units reported for the game in question.

Revenue Share: The percentage of total table game revenue reported for the game in question.

All dollar amounts in tables are in thousands of dollars; add “000” for true total

Unit Share

The real estate of Nevada's table gaming pits has shifted remarkably over the past thirty-eight years. As the chart below demonstrates, the percentage of gaming pits devoted to blackjack has declined steadily, while that devoted to “other games” like pai gow, pai gow poker, mini baccarat, and poker-based games has increased.

Revenue Share

The amount of floor space devoted to a game, however, is only one piece of the total puzzle. Games are only as useful as the amount of revenue they produce.

For that reason, the revenue share per game, defined as the percentage of total table game revenues earned by a type of game, is a key metric in analyzing the importance of various games to overall casino performance.
